Discover the nature which thrives and survives around your local waterways!

Maryhill was a vast green space 250 years ago but when the Forth and Clyde Canal was built approx. 230 years ago, the area very quickly became an industrial town.

Animals and plants have had to adapt to survive and they now use the Canal and River Kelvin to find food and shelter. Explore nature at work in the heart of Maryhill and record your findings along the way using this leaflet. Use the map as a route guide to discover nature in the flesh and in artwork along the way!

●●● Maryhill Nature Trail

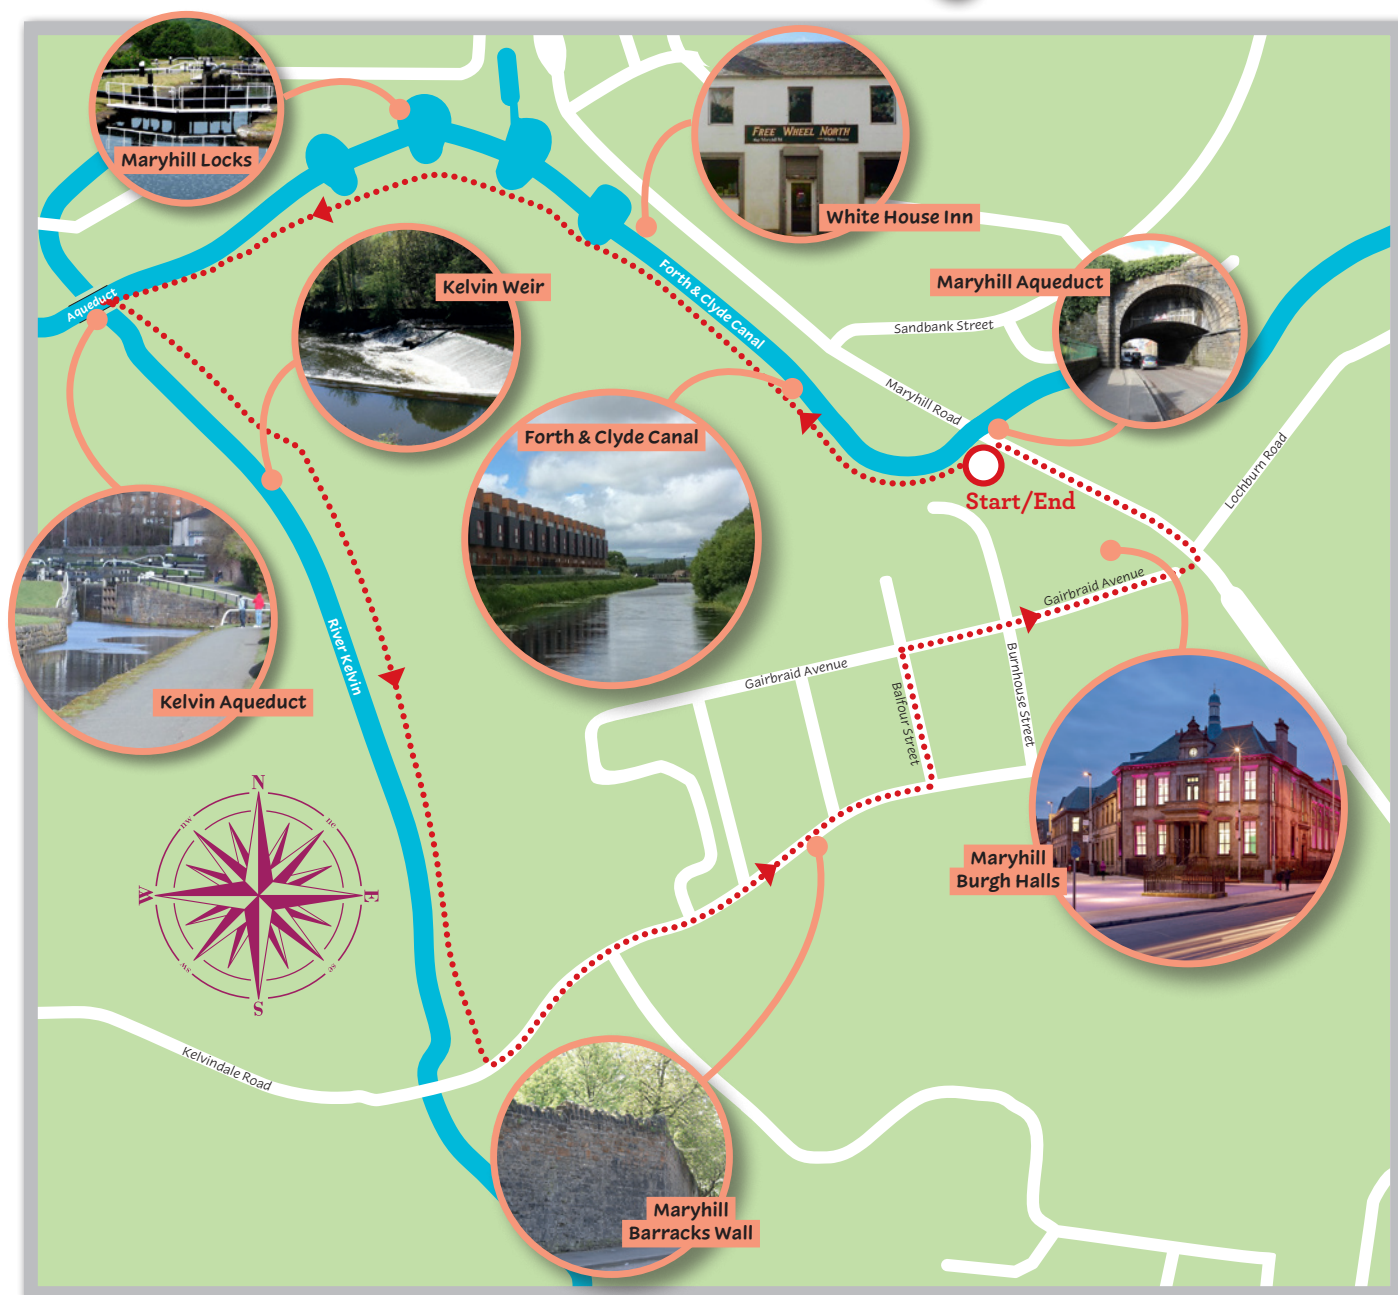

A low level walk along iconic sites of the Forth and Clyde Canal and River Kelvin. With a mix of historic and natural sites, this walk has something for all urban and nature explorers.

Mostly wide, smooth and flat. One short steep stretch going down to the Kelvin Walk Way from the Canal towpath with railings on one side for support.
